One of the longest sessions that the New York Methodist Episcopal Conference has held in some years came to a close Tuesday night at 11 o'clock with the reading of the appointments by Bishop Wilson.

Dr. Baragwanath and the Rev. Mr. Cranston have both been removed from their churches in this city and sent to other appointments. Dr. Baragwanath has been sent to St. Paul's Church, Peekskill, and the Rev. Mr. Cranston has been sent to Grace Church, Newburgh.

Dr. Baragwanath has been succeeded at St. James Church by the Rev. Joseph Wilbur Tetley who comes from St. Paul's Church, Peekskill. The Rev. Mr. Cranston has been succeeded at the Clinton Avenue Church by the Rev. Robert A. Greenwell who comes from the Methodist Church at Dobbs Ferry.

Dr. Grinton has been returned as district superintendent of the Kingston District and Dr. W. H. Moser has been returned to the Trinity Methodist Church in this city.

Although it was expected that Dr. Baragwanath would be transferred to the transfer of the Rev. Mr. Cranston was rather unexpected. Mr. Baragwanath has been pastor of the Clinton Avenue Methodist Church for the last nine years and during that time has done excellent work. Dr. Cranston has been assigned, is one of the largest churches of the conference and pays a salary of $2,000 a year. The church also employs a secretary to assist the pastor in his work.

The Rev. Mr. Tetley, who succeeds Dr. Baragwanath, is a brother of Mrs. George F. Rice, wife of Dr. George F. Rice of No. 66 Downs street. He was a member of the Central New York Conference in 1902-3, being stationed at Georgetown and Otisville, and in 1904 he was stationed at Truxton in the same conference. He was transferred to the New York Conference in 1905 and was stationed at Cornwallville and Durham in 1905-6. Then for two years he was at Highland Mills; 1910-1912 he was at Highland; 1913-14 he was at Catskill and since that time at St. Paul's Church, Peekskill. The Rev. Mr. Tetley is married and has a family of five children.

The Rev. Mr. Greenwell, who succeeds the Rev. Mr. Cranston at the Clinton Avenue Church, is a graduate of Drew Theological Seminary and 35 years of age. He has been ordained for five years and for the last four years has been stationed at Dobbs Ferry. Previous to that he was stationed at Staatsburg for a year. He is married and has one small son.

The Rev. C. G. Gorse has been appointed to the Methodist Church at Port Ewen. The Rev. Mr. Gorse has been in the ministry of the Methodist Church for the last 26 years.

Orders From City Hall Folks Kept Stork on the Wing

After Delivering Three Very Young Policemen, it Was Necessary to Fill Orders of Mail Carriers and Civil Service Board Secretary.

The radio at police headquarters buzzed insistently this morning when it was tuned in and heard the news, said that I might as well leave a namesake at his home, or otherwise he might find it necessary to have my job listed under civil service rules and then fix it so that I could not pass the examination necessary to qualify. Well as I have been filling this job for more years than I can count in a most satisfactory manner and did not want my ability questioned I also filled that order.

So if any of you folks who own radios and happen to hear these few remarks of mine you will know why there are at least five happy smiles on as many faces when you drop in at the city hall these days.

Just then the stork's monologue was interrupted by what sounded like the like the ring of a telephone bell and he muttered disconsolately, "Wouldn't that beat the band. Just when I want to talk a while alone comes an order that has to be filled at once."

As the radio suddenly ceased to buzz it is presumed that the stork at that moment hurried out with a bundle in his bill bound for some one's home.

Prompt Repairs Are a Measure of Protection

When your automobile is mechanically "right" it is about the most pleasurable and convenient thing you own. It will stay right much longer if mechanical difficulties are fixed as soon as they appear. The development of serious defects, limits the use and life of any car.

Your car, if carefully cared for is least likely to go up in smoke, or to become uncontrollable and involve you in an accident. Yet, no matter how careful you are, the menace of fire, theft, and accident is always present—and against them there is no sure protection except insurance. It's our business to provide you with protection against such loss. Get your automobile insurance here covering fire, theft, collision, liability and property damage before trouble comes.

Painted Copper.

Eighteen pieces of painted copper, offered for sale in a North Wales village, were bought for $125 by an agent for a group of London art dealers.

The dealers reacquired the parcel among themselves. The highest bid was $2270. The successful dealer then sold the lot to a private collector for $2000, who in turn sold them to the South Kensington museum for $1000. Reassembled, says Gene Barton in the Mentor magazine, these pieces of "painted copper" proved to be an altar piece by Leonardo the great French enameleur. The Paris Louvre has an enamel by this artist, which it values at $200,000. It is one of the oldest arts, says Barton. It was done in India and China centuries before the Western world developed it.

Old Proverbs.

"Taking coals to Newcastle" is English, but the Greeks had a similar saying, "Taking coals to Athens," for the city was at that time infested with these birds. Other such expressions throughout the East convey the same idea.

THE HOME SALOON.

The average woman wants liquor put out of reach because of sympathy for the families of hard drinkers. She wants to believe and therefore does believe that the Volstead law has stopped drunkenness and done away with the saloon. The average woman is apt to turn a deaf ear to city police testimony showing, not an end of, but too often an increase in drunkenness and brutality. But there is at least one woman who takes a widely different view in consequence of what she sees in the course of her daily and nightly duties. She is Major Hattie Hopkins, in charge of the Rescue Home at 303 North Ninth street, Philadelphia, and the record of that city quotes her thus:

"Conditions in the Tenderloin are ten times worse than at any period during the regime of the saloon. The horrible poisons that are being sold here make beasts of men, rob them of their reason, and make them a pest to the animal. In the old days the wage earner went into the saloon, drank his glass of beer or whisky, and went home. Now the district is infested with hip-pocket bootleggers, and there is another source of trouble. Scores of homes in the Tenderloin have become distillery plants. Families are making hard liquor out of potato peels and almost anything that will produce high-voltage alcohol. Beer and wine are also being manufactured in large quantities. The saloon has been transferred to the home. Something is wrong somewhere. I invite any citizen to come and take a walk with me around the Tenderloin after 11 o'clock at night. He or she will see things that will open their eyes regarding the liquor problem."

CLASSES AT HARVARD.

The protests against new regulations at Harvard University involving discrimination against negro students have in some cases been made on the ground that such discrimination is a radical departure from principles upheld from the outset. This has brought to light the interesting fact that, during Harvard's first 137 years there was discrimination against white students of the poorer classes. According to a contributor to the Boston Transcript, from the foundation of the university in 1636 to about 1773 students were seated, not in alphabetical order, but according to the rank of their parents. It appears that each parent was ranked according to his family pedigree, his wealth, his business or profession, and the public offices he had held. Judge Paine Wingate, graduate of Harvard in 1759, is thus quoted: "The scholars were often enraged beyond bounds for their disappointment in their place, and it was some time before a class could be settled down into an acquiescence in their allotment."

It is reasonably supposed that less disturbance was caused by the seating according to rank in the classroom than over the assignment, according to the same rule, of dormitory rooms and positions at table in the commons. It is stated that in the same period seats were allotted according to rank even in the New England churches, as shown by an article in the Springfield Republican on the early days of the First church in that city. Harvard's discrimination against negro students appears to be a marked reversal of its policy for some decades following the Civil War, but there is precedent for it in its earlier history.

The refusal of Federal Judge Morton to allow two immigrants to adopt two old American surnames in place of their own unsightly patronymics, on the ground that good American names should be protected from such a cheapening process, calls to mind the wholesale appropriation of the best Southern surnames by the nameless negro ex-slaves after the Civil War. The Southerners did not protest, partly perhaps because no protest of theirs at that time would have received Federal government notice, and partly because many of them were amused rather than alarmed, knowing that the negroes who had taken their surnames would never be mistaken for members of even the most remote and rundown branches of their families.

What do you want to know about Nature Subjects? Send any questions of general interest to the Nature Notes Department of this paper, enclosing self-addressed and stamped envelope for reply.

Can You Answer These Questions?

1. If it takes seventeen years for the seventeen-year locust to hatch, what is it doing all that time?
2. How can I make my horse's coat look slick? I feed him well and groom him but his coat is rough.
3. What can I do to cure my canary of eating its feathers?

Answers in Tomorrow's Nature Notes.

Answers to Previous Questions.

1. What makes some leaves have their veins running all one way and some crisscross?

We suppose you mean that some have parallel veins and some not. We can't tell you "why," but there appears to be a relation between the vein arrangement and the kind of stem the plant has. Some stems grow as most trees grow, adding new woody layers around a central core, the newest at the outer circumference. These plants usually have not veined leaves. But some plants have their stems formed of little bundles of fibre, and the veins of leaves borne on such stems run lengthwise, or about parallel.

2. Can horses sneeze?

Yes, they have what are called "olfactory sacs" usually in pairs, and lined with a mucous membrane, in which lie the sensory or nerve cells. These smelling organs connect with the interior of the mouth.

3. Can you tell me the name of the eagle brought me wounded by some fishermen in whose boat it fell, feathers principally gray mixed with white and gold? It is not a bald head eagle.

Very scanty information to guess on, and does not tally with standard description of eagles. Our guess is, a large specimen of American Goshawk, which does have grayish penicillations on some of its feathers, and in youth, buff streaks on head and neck, also underneath but with brown streaks. This is only a guess. Read Bailey's Handbook of Birds of Western U. S. or Hoffmann's Guide to Birds of New York and New England for Eagles.

Primitive Malaysians.

The only intercourse the natives of the Malaysian jungles have with the outside world is through the headman of the nearest village, to whom they sell wild rubber in exchange for rice and dried fish. The headman does the trading and represents the villagers. They dispose of their rubber in the form of balls. When dipped in hot water, crude rubber becomes as soft as slush. They roll it into balls and add layer on layer. Since it is bought by weight, they slip a small stone now and then. They fool the native merchants in this way, but never the Chinese. A Chinese will take a long knife, sharp as a razor, and whack the ball into four parts, with its little stone exposed. The dress of the Sakai man is merely a loin cloth of the roughest weave, and that of the women, a single garment or skin, which hangs from the waist.

History of Virgin Islands.

A little book, "Annual and Commercial Directory of the Virgin Islands of the United States for 1923," published in St. Thomas, contains a calendar in which are noted anniversaries of outstanding events in the history of the islands of St. John, St. Thomas and St. Croix. It records that "Eric the Dane took possession of St. Thomas in 1000" and the "Formal transfer of the Danish West Indies to the United States was made on March 21, 1917." One reads that "Fawcett and two other pirates were hanged at St. Thomas on September 11, 1825," while nearly a hundred years before, "St. Croix was purchased by Denmark from France on September 23, 1733." "Colonial Councils were granted to the Islands in 1833"; on March 1 and 2, 1878, there was an "outbreak in St. Croix, much property destroyed and rioters killed."

Many Languages in India.

There are many races in India, and the individuals are as different as German is from a Frenchman, and as easy to recognize as belonging to different races. Some women wear skirts, some wear trousers. Some men wear trousers, some wear skirts. And some wear neither skirts nor trousers. They simply wear a piece of cloth wound about their bodies. As different and numerous as are their costumes, religions, customs and races, so are the languages. The official census records 220 different dialects. It also shows that over one hundred different languages are spoken in India. These are not dialects. They are absolutely differing tongues—as different as English and French. And all these more than five score of languages are spoken in one country.

"Closing" and "Adjourning."

There is a difference between "closing" and "adjourning" a meeting. The word "adjourn" means "to put off to another day," while "to close" means "the end." Therefore, if the business is unfinished, or if the meeting is a regular weekly, fortnightly or monthly affair, it is adjourned to a stated date. If, however, the meeting is an extraordinary one, called for a special purpose, as soon as that business is completed the meeting is closed. In the former case, the chairman generally says: "We will now adjourn this meeting until such and such a date," while in the latter, the formula is: "We will now close this meeting," etc.

Borax Once Scarce and Expensive.

One of the first chemicals that entered into commerce was borax, one of three or four "industrial chemicals" of ancient times. Central Asia was its only source during 4,000 years; its mining was dangerous and expensive and in that time the whole world used only about 12,000 tons, an average of not more than six tons a year. Now the United States alone produces 40,000 tons a year and borax enters into the making of scores of the most common necessities of everyday life.

PHOENICIA FISH ASS'N MEETING THURSDAY

The Phoenicia Fish and Game Association, which has enjoyed a flourishing and continually increasing membership since its organization about a year ago, will hold a meeting on Thursday evening at Phoenicia Hall, at which time motion pictures of "The Idyl of the Catskills," furnished by the State

Conservation Commission, will be shown.

"The Idyl of the Catskills" was filmed by Mr. Mains, a well known motion picture expert, and afterwards secured by the State Conservation Commission for displaying throughout the state the results to be enjoyed by sportsmen from the work carried on by the commission.

Anne Conwell, a well known screen favorite, is featured in "The Idyl of the Catskills," and there are a number of excellent views showing well known trout fishermen, including Al Wispell, proprietor of the Central Hotel.

A lecture by one of the Conservation Commission's staff will accompany the picture. Mr. Whispell, who is president of the Phoenicia Club, will preside and introduce the speaker. There will not be any charge for admission and all members of the Phoenicia Association daily, carrying nearly half a million passengers.

Does Seem Strange at That.

BOTH NEGROES
HAD SOME LUCKRedmond Narrowly Missed Getting Bullet in Stomach Instead of Hip and Gray Might Easily Have Been Killed By Giant Redmond When Latter Got The Gun.Charles Gray, the negro, who shot Columbus Redmond, another negro, at Ulster Landing, Tuesday, is in the Ulster county jail, awaiting the action of the grand jury on a charge of assault in the first degree. He was arrested by Deputy Sheriff Seth Jocelyn who found him walking from around a kiln at the Goldrick brickyard, at Goldrick's Landing, about an hour and a half after the shooting.Sheriff Kolts, Deputy Sheriff Jocylyn, Sergeant James Cunningham, Corporal Lounsbury and State Trooper Alsdorf, left the court house about noon when they were informed over the telephone by Walter Woods, superintendent of the Dwyer brickyard, of the shooting and made a hurried trip in two autos to the scene, they understanding that a man had been killed. They were pleased to learn upon arriving that no murder had been committed and that Redmond, the victim, had been shot in his hip. The men had a quarrel while engaged in loading a brick barge and Redmond had given Gray a slap in the face. This angered Gray and he told Redmond that he was going to shoot him and Gray went to his shack up on the hill.Concluding that Gray intended to carry out his threat, Redmond called up the sheriff's office and told
Mr. Jocelyn what Gray had said.
Redmond was told if he thought Gray meant business to evade meeting him and to go to Justice of the Peace Walter Webber at Flatbush and swear out a warrant for Gray's arrest and notify the sheriff's office and they would come out at once and arrest him.It was but a short time later that the telephone bell rang again and Deputy Jocelyn, who answered the call, was told by Mr. Woods that Redmond had been shot. The sheriff's posse was soon gotten together and a hurry run made to Ulster Landing where inquiry was made of the cause for the shooting and a search at once made for Gray. Not finding the shooter at Ulster Landing, Deputy Sheriff Jocelyn and Corporal Lounsbury went in the Ford car to Goldrick's brickyard about two miles toward Kingston and there, as before stated, saw a negro walking from behind a kiln. Noticing that his collar band was open and that the shirt was bloodstained he suspected that the negro was Gray. He stopped him, asking his name and where he came from. He did not give his correct name, said he came from Virginia and that he had just arrived there and was not working.
Then Mr. Jocelyn asked him if his name was not Charles Gray, and he answered that it was. He was told he was under arrest and was taken back to Ulster Landing where he was identified and later brought to jail where after questioning by District Attorney Traver he was locked up. In the evening Gray was taken before Justice of the Peace Webber in the town of Ulster and held to await the action of the grand jury.The story is that while Redmond was walking with Superintendent Woods on the way to get a warrant as suggested from the sheriff's office, Gray, who stood on a side hill with a 38 calibre revolver, fired at Redmond and the bullet went between the men. Woods made a quick jump, getting behind a tree, and Redmond ran, followed by Gray, who shot at him but missed as they were running around a shack. Gray made a quick turn and ran around in the opposite way and met Redmond coming toward him. Gray had the revolver pointed in front of him toward Redmond's stomach but just as he was pulling the trigger Redmond with one hand struck the revolver and the bullet instead of entering Redmond's stomach, struck him in the hip, making a bad but it is not thought to be a serious wound. Redmond, with the other hand knocked Gray down and then bleking up the revolver gave his intended murderer a battering over the head with the revolver butt, putting into the scalp a deep cut and zonging out a bunch of woolly hair. Redmond is a very large negro, almost a giant, and Gray is a lucky chap that he was not beaten much worse than he had been, while Redmond is extremely lucky in that he hit the revolver just as he did or in all probability he would have been killed. Another fortunate part of the affair is that Deputy Jocelyn happened to be in the right place at the right time when he spotted Gray ambling along, as a minute or two either way would have been sufficient for the would-be murderer to have made a successful getaway for a time at least."THE CHARM SCHOOL"

Automobile Foot.

"Household's knee" has dropped out and we have something else to take its place. This is what is known as "automobile foot," which is selective, aptotic and harmless. This is caused by the slight cramp from holding the foot on the accelerator for long periods. It is not probable that many will seek medical assistance from this new ailment. It must not be supposed that automobile foot, or chauffeur's foot, as it is also called, has the sole distinction even at present, for there are other vacational foot disorders, such as "policeman's heel," "dancer's foot," "golfer's foot," and others.—Scientific Ameri-"Groundhog Day."

Groundhog day, or Candlemas, February 2, is the day when the groundhog awakens from his slumber and comes out of his hole to look for his shadow. If the sun is shining and he casts his shadow, he hurries back to his hole, knowing that six weeks more of wintry weather is due; if the sky is overcast he counts his slumber at an end, for winter is nearly at an end. There are similar beliefs in weather forecasting at Candlemas time in Germany, England and other countries.Columbia

THE FIRST FLY

"I am really not appreciated as I should be," said the first house fly to the window-pane.

The window-pane paid no attention to the fly's remark. The window-pane wasn't in the habit of answering back.

To be sure the fly was walking all over the window-pane and the window-pane might have objected. But the window-pane made no sound.

"The First But-terfly."

It might be walked over and still it wouldn't complain of such treatment.

"Whether you agree or disagree," the fly continued, "I spoke the truth."

The window-pane still was quiet.

"I suppose," the fly went on, "you agree with me because you do not contradict me."

"Well, I don't think so much of your opinion. You can't even wash your own face. A helpless sort of a thing you are."

"You should be old enough to do better than that. Yes, you really should."

"Still I think people are very rude."

"The family in this house came home today and they raved about all they had seen. They spoke of the feathery delicacy of the willow trees which were just coming out."

"They spoke of the first butterfly they had seen and of the first bumble bee."

"They spoke of the lovely warm air and of the soft breeze and of the buds opening upon the trees. They said that even while they were out things seemed to open up almost before their very eyes."

"It seems they had been for a ride, and coming back they were quite sure that the buds were further opened than they had been when they had started out."

"And all of this pleased them very much indeed. They said in some gardens and parks and along some roads things were further out than along others."

"This all interested them very much. Then I began buzzing about. I crawled up the window-pane—up you, my silent friend—and then I crawled down."

"I flew about a little and then I did some fine tricks. I brushed my legs and wings and wiped off my face—using my legs to assist me with my face."

"I thought I would be greatly admired for all this."

"And yet I was not noticed. But before long someone noticed me."

"The first fly," the person said.

"Oh, dear," said another. At first I thought the second person was speaking to me or of me affectionately. It was nice to be called 'dear.' I had never been called that before."

"I twisted my right leg over my head and then twisted it back again—a very superior trick and by that time I thought I'd be called 'darling' or 'dearest' or 'little sweetheart.'"

"But not a bit of that."

"The person who had said 'Oh, dear,' had meant:

"Oh, dear! how horrid to see a fly. A fly is one of the things we don't like to see brought along by the warm weather."

"I was glad that that warm weather brought me. I felt glad that I made the people displeased. All my mean feelings came over me which have been handed down to me from my grandfather and grandmother flies and from their grandfather and grandmother flies before them."

"I do not know whether it is necessary to add before them. I don't suppose grandfathers and grandmothers ever come after one. But they might! There's no telling."

"Anyway, it shows how I am not appreciated. They seem to like all the other 'first things,' but not the first fly."

"Oh, well, I don't mind. My fly heart will not be broken."

"Ah, I believe they're going to get the swatter after me. Well, if they can catch me it's fair enough. Only I don't want to be tortured. One good swat I don't mind."

"My fly life may be long or short. It doesn't matter to me. And I suppose it does matter to them, as I do spread disease. Disease and I are friends. Disease has been a family friend for years. Shows what we are, I suppose, and why we're not appreciated. There, I'm being swatted now. Good-by, window-pane."

But the window-pane never answered. The window-pane was noted for being very quiet.

HOME-MADE CANDIES

The candy made at home is always much cheaper and usually more wholesome than that bought in the shops.

Butter Scotch.—Take two cups of granulated sugar, two tablespoons of water, a tablespoonful of butter and half without stirring until it hardens in the spoon. Pour out on flat buttered plates and when cool mark in squares.

Candied Popcorn.—Roll one cupful of pulverized sugar, three tablespoons of water, and one tablespoonful of butter until it is just ready to pour; add three quarts of nicely popped corn, stir until the kernels are coated.

Molasses Candy.—To one and one-half pounds of sugar add one cupful of molasses, one cupful of water, and one-fourth cupful of vinegar. Boil until a hard ball may be formed in cold water, add one-half teaspoonful of cream of tartar as soon as the boiling commences. When almost done add one-half cupful of butter and one-fourth teaspoonful of soda. Pour out to cool, then pull.

Sultana Caramels.—Melt one-fourth of a cupful of butter, add two cupfuls of sugar, one-half cupful of milk, one-fourth cupful of molasses, and heat to the boiling point and boil seven minutes. Add two squares of unsweetened chocolate and stir until melted, then boil seven minutes longer, add one cupful of chopped nuts and two tablespoonsful of chopped raisins. Beat until creamy. Pour out and mark in aquares.

Ice Cream Candy.—Mix three cupfuls of granulated sugar with one-half cupful of vinegar and one and one-half cupfuls of cold water and a tablespoonful of butter. Roll to a hard ball, then pull when cool.

Coconut Candy.—Take powdered sugar, using a cupful; add a tablespoonful of softened butter and cream it well into the sugar; add coffee, a few drops at a time, mixing well, until the sugar is creamy; stir in a cupful of coconut and drop by spoonfuls on a buttered paper.

MANY WOMEN PAY INCOME TAX

20.4 Per Cent of Returns in State for 1922 Made Independently by Women — Paid $5,108,073 in Taxes.

What part does the "independent" woman of means take in meeting the tax obligations of the state?

This question is answered in so far as the State Income Tax is concerned in a collection of data made public today by the State Tax Commission. These figures show that 20.4 per cent of the returns made by New York state residents for the calendar year, 1922, were made independently by women. Officials of the commission believe that the percentage will be at least as high for this year's income tax, which is now being collected and must be paid on or before April 15th.

The figures made public today are the latest available. They are based on returns made in 1922 for income during 1922, and the information contained in these returns has been completely tabulated and analyzed by the commission. The figures show that there were 1,089,129 returns from New York state residents. Of these, single women not heads of families made 172,717 returns, married women made separate returns to the number of 20,618; and unmarried women as heads of families made 28,667 returns. Adding these three classes of returns which composed the returns from "independent" women, the figures show that there were 222,002 such returns, or 20.4 per cent of the total number filed.

The women filing separate returns paid 16.5 per cent of the total tax from New York state residents, or $5,108,073.00. It was divided among the three classes as follows:

Single women, not heads of families, $2,742,863; married women making separate returns, $1,969,739; heads of families, unmarried women, $395,741.

This tax paid by the women was based on taxable income amounting to $578,023,500, or 15.1 per cent of the total taxable income of New York state residents, which amounted to $3,819,225,900. The taxable income was divided as follows, among the three classes:

Single women, not heads of families, $366,836,300; married women making separate returns, $137,021,100; heads of families, unmarried women, $74,166,100.

Among the single women not heads of families there were 105 who reported incomes amounting to $100,000 and over, who paid a total tax of $743,475. There were 114 married women making separate returns who reported income of $100,000 and over, and 18 unmarried women heads of families reporting income in that class.

In the case of single women not heads of families, income from personal services represented by far the largest percentage of taxable income amounting to 62 per cent of the total of this class. Unmarried women as heads of families reported almost the same percentage of taxable income as coming from this source, namely 63.9. In the case of married women making separate returns, however, dividends represented the largest source of income.

CLUB MEMBERS OF 1878 NOW WIDELY SCATTERED

Their Names Found As Building Is Remodeled.

A number of names written on a side wall of a room in the basement of the brick building, corner Broadway and O'Neil street, which is being remodeled and modernized by Arthur J. Olivet, the owner, has brought back to the memory of some of those whose names are on the wall that they were members of a social club made up of youths that had its meeting place there in 1878 or forty-five years ago. Among the names written are Fred W. Diehl, Augustus H. Miller, Harvey Decker, Frank Freer, Frank Dennis and Jasper Joy. Miller and Diehl are still living in Kingston. Decker resides in New York and has charge of a large printing plant for J. Butler who owns a large number of groceries and markets. Dennis is said to live in the state of Washington. Freer lives in the town of Esopus, while Joy is dead. Peter Carle kept a grocery in the store at the corner and the youths rented the basement room for a club headquarters for the members of which there were a score.

DECISION ON WYNKOOP CLAIM

Richard L. Wynkoop's Bill For $171.25 Cut to $7 and Edith Wynkoop's Disallowed in Settlement of Kiersted Estate.

Surrogate George F. Kaufman has handed down a decision in the matter of the judicial settlement of the account of Charles E. Wynkoop as executor of the last will and testament of Rachel Maria Kiersted late of this city, who was the wife of the late George F. Kiersted. There was a contest raised over the settlement of the accounts of the executor.

Richard L. Wynkoop, a brother of the deceased presenting a claim, for $171.25, and the latter's daughter, Edith Wynkoop, also presented a claim which the executor refused to pay. A number of hearings were held before the surrogate and considerable testimony taken. Maurice W. Eltinge was attorney for the executor; F. W. Brooks for Nathan Wynkoop, an interested party; Andrew J. Cook for Richard L. Wynkoop and Edith Wynkoop the claimants.

The decision by Surrogate Kaufman is as follows: "Richard L. Wynkoop has filed against the estate of Rachel Maria Kiersted, deceased, a claim for $171.25 for services alleged to have been rendered and supplies alleged to have been furnished to the decedent in her lifetime. Edith Wynkoop has filed a similar claim for $52.50 for services alleged to have been rendered to the decedent. Richard L. Wynkoop is a brother, and Edith Wynkoop, his daughter, is a niece of the decedent.

"The evidence which has been presented in support of these claims is not satisfactory or convincing. The testimony of the claimants stands practically alone and is not corroborated by the evidence of other witnesses. In fact the testimony of a large number of disinterested and credible witnesses negates the existence of valid claims rather than supports their existence. When tested by the rule that the burden of proof is upon the claimants to prove their claims by a fair preponderance of evidence and by the further rule that where a claim for services is made by a near relative the presumption is that such services were rendered gratuitously, the proof offered by the claimants is far from sufficient.

"After a most careful review of the evidence, I am convinced that the greater part of the services claimed to have been rendered were never in fact rendered and that a large part of the supplies alleged to have been furnished were never in fact furnished to the decedent, and that such services as were rendered and such supplies as were furnished were rendered and furnished gratuitously and without expectation on the part of the claimants to be paid therefor, and without expectation on the part of the decedent to pay therefor. It is clearly apparent that the claimants were disappointed in that they were not made beneficiaries under the will of the decedent, but it is not the province of this court to re-make the will of deceased persons or to remedy real or imaginary grievances of relatives who do not share in the testamentary gifts of a competent testator or testatrix by the allowance of unjust claims.

"There are two items in the claim of Richard L. Wynkoop totaling $7 which he seems to have paid to Doctor Frank A. Johnston for services rendered to the decedent, and which it is not clear that these services were rendered at the request of the decedent. It is, nevertheless, true that she received the benefit thereof, and in fairness, the claimant should be reimbursed to that extent.

"The claim of Richard L. Wynkoop is, therefore, allowed in the sum of $7, being the amount paid by him to Doctor Johnston and is in all other respects disallowed, without costs to either party.

"The claim of Edith Wynkoop is disallowed in all respects, with $25 costs to the executor against said claimant.

"The account of the executor with the one change incident to the allowance to Richard L. Wynkoop of the amount above set forth is allowed and approved and a decree is directed to be entered accordingly.

"Decree to be settled before me on the 17th day of April, 1923, at ten o'clock a. m."

Dated, April 10, 1923.

"AUNT DINAH'S QUILTING PARTY" AT ST. JAMES'S.

It is many years since the women of Kingston have seen a quilting bee. In the days of our grandmothers almost every household had one. Bright, fancy pieces of calico, cloth and silk were carefully treasured up and when sufficient were obtained the neighbors and friends invited and a bed quilt made. Many of the descendants of these grandmothers possess and are very proud of one of these old quilts that has been handed down to them. Many were very beautiful. In some the pieces were put together in various designs, flowers, domestic animals, houses and even figures of prominent persons. The ladies of St. James's Methodist Church have been at work for some time to revive the old custom and a regular old-fashioned quilting party will be held in the church on the evening of April 18, to which all are invited. In the meantime the committee having the matter in charge will be glad to receive patches for the quilt. The design for the quilt is taken from one that belonged to the Clinton family and will be on exhibition in the windows of Gregory & Co. In accordance with the old custom all the young and old beans will be expected in the evening. Grandma Pepper will preside, assisted by pretty Dinah Peabody. Deacon Peabody and good old Parson Goodbody will welcome all.

MENAGERIE HELPS "AL" CATCH TROUT

Famous Phenicia Fisherman Has Interesting Pets Which Display True Sportsman's Spirit During Trout Season.

Al Wispell, proprietor of The Central House at Phenicia, and well known among sportsmen as one of the most successful hunters and trout fishermen in the Catskill mountain region, was in town on Tuesday, calling on friends.

Mr. Wispell reports excellent success by trout fishermen whose catches have more than repaid them for the chill of frosty mornings when they have been wading through the brooks in the vicinity of Big Indian. Mr. Wispell has had unusually fine success in his own catches since the season opened last Saturday, and his hotel is filled with sportsmen from New York who each year take advantage of the early fishing.

The success of his catches is modestly attributed by Mr. Wispell to the intelligence of his famous fish dog, Leo, rather than to his own expertness. Leo has been famous as a hunting dog for several years, and much in demand by friends of the genial Phenicia sportsman. He developed his ability in pointing out fish late last season, and it was thought that the excitement of chasing bears and other wild animals over the mountains during the winter might have spoiled him for the quieter quest of fish this spring.

But with the opening of the trout season, Leo, like his master, began to display the true qualities of sportsmanship and on the first day of the trout season he slipped his collar and accompanied Mr. Wispell and several friends when they started early in the morning for the deep pools where the trout have been fattening during the winter.

When the fishing party was about ready to make their first cast, they discovered Leo, standing on the bank of the stream, gazing intently in the water about five feet away. His tail pointing in true pointer fashion just as if he was pointing for quail, pheasants, wildcats or bears. Mr. Wispell thought for an instant that Leo would frighten the trout, but then recalled the excellent service the dog had rendered during the closing days of the trout season last year and so he made a cast, his hook landing on the water directly over the spot at which Leo was gazing. A two-pound trout rose so suddenly to grasp the hook that he hurled himself several feet out of the water and frightened not only Leo but his master.

After that, Leo moved quietly to another part of the pool, gazed intently in the water and began to point. Another cast by Mr. Wispell was followed by the landing of another two-pounder. Then all was clear sailing, or rather clear pointing, for Leo, his owner and the other members of the party, and the day's fishing was declared by everybody to be the most successful "first day" any of them ever had enjoyed.

The trout, especially the older ones whose weight goes to as big a figure as any trout fisherman dares to mention without being called on for proof, do not yet seem to realize that Leo is helping the sportsmen, and in fact when Leo wades into the stream and drinks quarts of water which he does not really want, they will even frisk around his nose, upon which he will begin to point, and a well-directed cast invariably is followed by the landing of a big trout.

"Mose," the famous mule which Mr. Wispell drove for many years to the fishing grounds, is now too old for such strenuous exercise but is still tethered in a lot near the village public camp site, where he, too, can wade into the stream as Leo does, and allow the trout to frisk around his nose or his heels. While "Mose" still enjoys the full use of his heels, he never disturbs the trout with them.

As the season advances and Mr. Wispell decides to seek the quieter pools and cooler streams on the mountain sides, "Mose" will be supplanted this year, as he was a year ago, by "Lizzie," who has been undergoing extensive repairs at a local garage during the winter. The repairs to "Lizzie" would not have been necessary if "Mose" had preserved his temper one day in the fall when Mr. Wispell decided to look over a distant woodlot with a view to drawing fuel from it if the winter proved severe and the coal supply ran short. In former years "Mose" had carried his master to the woodlot and came galloping up to the hitching post when he saw Mr. Wispell preparing for a trip. When Mr. Wispell ran "Lizzie" out of the garage instead, and then seated himself, "Mose" gave a short or two and let his heels fly at the radiator and other parts of the car, with the result that "Lizzie's" only trip was in tow of another car to Kingston for repairs.

"Tom," the big Belgian cat which is the admiration of all visitors to Mr. Wispell's hostelry, has been trying to emulate the example of Leo, the dog, but Leo apparently realizes the cat's natural fondness for fish, and with true sportsman's instinct has decided not to take any chances and has succeeded thus far in keeping "Tom" safely within the bounds of the Central House grounds.

SPECIAL-SIX TOURING, $1275

Wherever motor cars are discussed and that's nearly everywhere, somebody is sure to remark—"That Studebaker Special-Six is a regular automobile."

The Studebaker Special-Six has been on the market for four years. Each year has been added to it such refinements and improvements as time has made possible. Today there are more than one hundred and twenty-five thousand in everyday service and we don't believe there's a dissatisfied owner.

The name was selected because comparative tests against all kinds of cars made this car stand out as something special and apart from the ordinary run of automobiles. It requires special merit to warrant calling any car a special—and if the value isn't special the car quickly fades away.

Count the "Special-Sixes" that have appeared since the arrival of the Studebaker Special-Six. That's the proof of the value of the original Special-Six.

WAR ON PREDATORY ANIMALS

Organized Drive Against Enemies of Stockmen Yielded Good Results in the Past Year.

During the past year an average of 266 hunters, trappers and poisoners was employed under the supervision of the biological survey, United States Department of Agriculture, and many thousands of stockmen participated in the distribution of poisoned baits during the organized drives against predatory animals. Part of the men employed were paid by the federal government and part by the states and other co-operating agencies, which contributed $100,475 to the work. Hunters are required to turn in as evidence the skins or skulls of animals killed when found in suitable condition. Such positive evidence was obtained during the year in the case of 30,086 predatory animals, of which 687 were large gray wolves, 27,185 coyotes, 2,827 bobcats and Canada lynxes, 173 mountain lions, and 114 bears. Bears are generally regarded as game animals and are protected by some state laws. No effort is made to take any except individuals known to be destructive to stock. In addition to the dead animals secured, it is estimated that not less than 50,000 coyotes were killed in connection with extended poisoning operations, but their carcasses were not found.

The killing of about 80,000 predatory animals represents a saving of live stock and game for the year amounting to over $4,000,000. Skins sold during this period yielded $34,202.75, of which $22,875 was derived from skins taken during the same year.

ALEPPO

View of Aleppo and the Citadel.

(Prepared by the National Geographic Society, Washington, D. C.)

Eastern dispatches are coming to carry more and more often the name of Aleppo, little known to the ears of the present generation. But the name was once more familiar to western ears than that of almost any other city of the Near East save Constantinople itself, and it is probably destined to be great again when its position of the world settles down.

Four thousand years ago when Abraham moved to Palestine there was an established caravan route north and south through Syria from Egypt toward Babylon. And at least from the time of Phoenician greatness there was a similar route between the coast cities on the west and Assyria and Babylonia to the east. The oasis near which these great trade routes joined became the site of one of the world's first "crossroads towns," and since then, whenever the world about it has enjoyed peace and carried on trade, it has reaped the benefits in prosperity and importance.

Its own world sufficed for many centuries to keep Aleppo a thriving city into which scores of long camel caravans came yearly. The Crusaders did not greatly interfere with this prosperity, for the successes of the Crusaders stopped literally at Aleppo's walls. Antioch, on the Mediterranean, barely 70 miles away, was the first Syrian stronghold to be captured by the Christian knights and the last to be surrendered; but they were never able to subdue Aleppo, which stood for 300 years as a bar to Christian advance inland. The Mohammedan city, so close to the Crusaders' stronghold, became Saladin's capital, and it was from there that the Christians were finally driven out of the country.

After the Crusades Europe demanded an ever-increasing supply of spices and other products from the Far East, and Aleppo, near the western end of the land route over which such goods came, became more and more prosperous. Nearly all the western trading nations established representatives and warehouses in the city. The establishment of a sea route around Africa to the East injured Aleppo somewhat, and the opening of the Suez canal almost dried up its stream of east-west trade and brought up the pessimistic picture of a time when camel-trains might be a curiosity.

Now a Railway Junction.
But the railroad locomotive which westerners nickname "the steel horse" has proved Aleppo's "steel camel," and is bringing the city back to its old place of importance. The famous Bagdad railroad, which connects the mouth of the Euphrates with the Bosphorus and Europe, dips to Aleppo almost exactly at its mid-point and meets the railway which now extends from Egypt northward through Syria. The old important camel trails have thus given way to more important trails of steel and where the one contributed the equivalent of pennies the latter may yield the equivalent of dollars. Aleppo is in a fair way to become "the Chicago of the Near East."

The Aleppo of today may be compared in some ways to Damascus, 20 miles to the south. Both, on oases, are well watered by streams that lose themselves in the desert—or more properly are made to transform themselves into delightful orchards and gardens through ancient irrigation systems. Both are made up of white, flat-topped houses punctuated by the tall, slender towers of mosques. Both have their crowded, narrow streets, surging with a motley mixture of many Arabs, Jews and Armenians, and representatives of almost every other people of the Near East. Now that Syria is under French mandate, there is as well in Aleppo's crowded streets a sprinkling of the Latins who tried vainly to penetrate there during the Crusades.

Most interesting of Aleppo's sights, fittingly enough in a city built by commerce, are its huge covered bazaars, hardly to be matched elsewhere in the world. These arched rooms of subdued lights are stocked with almost every conceivable ware from crude pottery to handsome Chinese vases, from iron nails to golden chains of the finest workmanship, and from coarse cloths to the most superb product of the rug-weaver's art. In the meat bazaar one may choose a steak of beef, camel or horse and have it roasted to a turn while he looks on.

Happy Thought.

LED FIRST U. S. TROOPS IN EUROPE, AND LAST TO LEAVE

Scene of Historical Events.
Aleppo has been the scene of many of the incidents that go to build up the crowded history of the Near East. On the fringe of the Greek empire of the Tenth century, it was often fought over. The Egyptians held the place twice during the next hundred years. It was one of the most richly clothed cities to feed the wealth of Tammuz the Lame in 1400, when with his Indian elephants bearing archers and flame-throwers he captured and sacked it. Later the Mamelukes of Egypt controlled the city, until dominated by the Ottoman Turks in 1516. For three hundred years the Ottoman domination was undisputed, but again during the past century the Egyptians reached out and gripped Aleppo, holding it against the Turks from 1833 to 1941.

Aleppo's war chapter was written in 1918, when it marked Aleppo's advance through Syria at the time of the armistice. There the dashing British armored car squadron, which had driven the Turks and Germans northward, parked their little wheeled cars, and tied with the Australian flying corps in curving their linearity. The ultimate point of their advance was the little, inconspicuous-looking railway station at Mamluk Junction, a few miles north of Aleppo. This place had the appearance of the meeting point of any two unimportant local railroads in western America, but in fact was the point of great potential importance where the rail line from Egypt met the line which, not for a few minor breaks, extended west to the Bosphorus, and eastward toward Bagdad. Later the British withdrew, and under a mandate for Syria, the French took possession and held it today.

SIGNAL FIRES TO TELL OF FLIGHT BY AMUNDSEN

Plans of Explorer for Trip Across the North Pole Said to Be Complete.

Ronald Amundsen, the explorer, plans to hop off from Wainwright, on the north coast of Alaska, for his flight across the north pole to Spitzbergen on June 20, or as near thereafter as weather permits.

Because the date cannot be fixed exactly in advance and because preparations for relief if the airship meets with disaster in Spitzbergen depend on knowledge of the time of his flight, citizens of Nome, Alaska, and the chamber of commerce have planned a system of signal fires to carry the news of his start from Wainwright to the nearest radio station, 400 miles away.

This plan calls for the stationing of between twenty and thirty parties of two Eskimos each at intervals along the coast from Wainwright, near Point Barrow, to Nome via the Kobuk river, north of Bering straits.

Huge bonfires are to be built at intervals of about fifteen miles along the coast, driftwood and coal being used. When Amundsen starts his flight at Wainwright, the bonfire there will be lit. Observers at the succeeding station will be on the watch for the smoke and at sight of it will light their own fire. This will set in motion the chain of signal bonfires.

If the day is clear when Amundsen starts to fly across the pole it is believed the bonfire signals will work without a hitch and relay the news along the coast for 400 miles to Nome within a few hours. Even if one or two breakdowns occur and the Eskimos have to make the connections by carrying the signal, it will still be possible to witness the news from Nome in time to give warning at Spitzbergen to the scout planes that are to be there to render assistance if Amundsen meets with trouble on the latter part of his flight.

After the news is sent out from Nome by radio it can be relayed by radio, telegraph and cable to Spitzbergen.

Mrs. J. W. Downer, U. S. A., commanded the first United States army unit to enter France, and returned with the very last troops to leave the Rhine. Major Downer sailed for France July 27, 1917, as commander of the Sixth field artillery, First division, A. E. F., Battery A. He commanded the First and Second battalions of the Sixth field artillery, which fired the first shot in the war for America. At the seventh Olympic games, Antwerp, 1920, Major Downer was a member of the American riding team.

He has been awarded virtually every war medal or cross of every one of the allied nations—D. S. C., Croix de Guerre, Belgian Military Cross, Montenegro Order of Danilo, French Legion of Honor, etc.

DOG FINDS FAMILY RICHES

Fortune, Considered a Myth, Dog Up Near Alabama Homestead.

A dog, playing frantically in a tower near an old homestead at Courtland, Ala., uncovered a priceless treasure chest filled with gold and silver coins and plate of the Saunders family, one of the most prominent families in the South "before the war."

Miss Josephine Saunders of Memphis, Tenn., is heiress to the fortune, which for years has been considered a myth.

According to an old family legend, an aged colored slave hid a chest of money and silver during the Civil war, then died of apoplexy before he could get back to his master. Searches at intervals for 40 years brought no trace of the fortune, and the family dismissed it as "an old mammy's tale."

Miss Saunders has been informed that the find is authentic and that the value of the relics is great. Gold coins, none of later date than 1860, and some dating back to 1790, were found in the treasure chest.

RESTORES "DEAD" GOLDFISH

Woman Hospital Head Drops It Into a Salt Solution.

Here's a real fish story in which a goldfish was brought back to life after it was found "dead" in the Atlantic City hospital. Miss Nellie McGurran, the superintendent, is fond of pets, her special hobby being goldfish, who adorn the waiting room table of the hospital in an aquarium.

Miss McGurran noticed that one of the fish lay inert on top of the water, apparently dead. Gently lifting the fish out of the water she hastened to the dispensary and, calling one of the resident physicians had him mix a salt solution, into which she dropped the fish. In a few minutes it opened its mouth and started to breathe freely. It was then put on a special diet, furnished by one of the physicians, also a goldfish fancier.

"CLEAN UP WEEK" IS ANCIENT ART STARTS APRIL 16

The board of health at its regular monthly session Tuesday evening designated the week commencing April 16 as "Clean Up Week" in Kingston, and the cooperation of every citizen is urged in cleaning up the city of the winter's accumulation of dirt and rubbish.

Since the disappearance of the snow and ice from the yards and streets many residents have already taken up the work of cleaning up their back yards. The board of public works has the street sweeper out and is cleaning up the streets.

WANTS GAS CARS ON RAILROADS

Editor, The Freeman:

The Chamber of Commerce is to be congratulated upon their success in inducing the West Shore people to renovate the Union depot structure and cause its improved appearance to look more worthy of their city.

There is still one more important duty which I think they should take further steps to obtain for the material benefit of the business section of our community. The late prolonged winter proved to us the decided want of proper communication with the outlying districts that are accustomed to trade here. Snow caused many of the roads to be impassable to the bus services for a prolonged period and the rural folks were unable for many weeks to get into town for their usual shopping with the result that the shopkeepers felt the lack of trade very severely. The railroad, however, were able to keep their traffic open in spite of the severity of the weather but failed to supply the want by their inaction.

I would suggest that the Chamber of Commerce petition the various railroads running into our city to place gasoline driven motor coaches on their respective sections running from Pine Hill, Ellenville and Walkkill. Such an additional shuttle service run between the regular train schedule would give a considerable increase to the present infrequent and poor service on these lines and at the same time at a low cost to the roads. The western roads have found this plan a cheap feeder and at the same time have put a stop to the way the auto busses were depriving them of a most important part of their traffic.

WALL STREET.

Cling to Ancient Customs.

To the Karens, in Lower Burma, the great banyan trees, the caves and waterfalls, deep pools in the rivers and even the skies, are filled with mysterious demons. Bamboo "ladders" are set up for the demon inhabitants of trees, and the paths about a hill village are strewn with rolls of cotton, trays of colored rice balls, live chickens, bits of eggshell and other tempting offerings to induce the demons to forget their evil designs on the villagers. When they gather to feast in honor of the "bhinn" or family spirits, the young women of the hill tribes wear the effective seed-trimmed smock in which they work in the fields. But on the plains the Karen girls are adopting black velvet jackets in place of the seed-trimmed smock, the minor native arts are being forsaken for the music of the West, and houses are built on the solid ground, as are those of the neighboring Burmese. Only in the solitudes of the hills, far away from external influences, do the ancient Karen customs still prevail.

World Ungrateful to Mozart.

Mozart's body was buried in a "common grave," in the plainest manner possible, with nobody present except the keepers of the cemetery. Weeks after, when the wife visited the spot, she found a new grave-digger, who could not tell where her beloved husband was buried, and to this day the author of 14 Italian operas, 17 symphonies and dozens of cantatas and serenades, about 800 compositions in all, sleeps in an unknown grave. Salzburg, Austria, waited a half-century before she erected a bronze statue to her world-renowned genius. In the square of St. Michael, and 70 years after his death Vienna built him a monument in the cemetery of St. Mark. History scarcely furnishes a more pathetic life. "He filled the world with music, yet died in want and sorrow," says a biographer. He died December 4, 1791.

Astronomy and Astrology.

Today astrology is the shadow of astronomy, just as alchemy is of chemistry, but in the earlier ages, even of the Christian Era, there was no real distinction between the two. St. Isidore of Seville (of which place he became archbishop in 594), that encyclopedist of the knowledge of his day, was perhaps the first to draw a distinction between the two. John of Salisbury in the Twelfth century distinguished between metaphysics the legitimate study and metaphysics the illegitimate. Other church notables attributed astrology to good angels and to Abraham, and astrology to Cham. Astrology was the earlier study, though much true astrology was mixed up with it.

There Were Caricaturists Among the Cave Men.

Leonardo da Vinci Prominent in His Day for His Work—Has Been Power for Good.

Some of the most striking caricatures extant are from the hand of Leonardo da Vinci. They are satirical portraits of his contemporaries and distorted impressions of characters encountered during a busy day by the many-sided Italian genius; they might have been made for a modern magazine, so vivid are they, cruelly drawn, so vitally interesting.

But it was long before Da Vinci's day that the cave men who had their rugged abodes in the caverns of France and Spain, about which M. Ellis Faure has written so fascinatingly. It has remained, however, for the modern mind to evolve a style in caricature that makes of it a distinct and engaging art.

Goya and Daumier were of the cult in its finest manifestations. Gustave Dore, who never really learned to draw with precision, has bequeathed to use some gorgeous caricatures and (among the nonprofessional artists) Victor Hugo has shown himself possessed of a spirited gift for the delineation of grimly humorous portraits drawn with a sureness of touch worthy of Gavarni.

In our own country caricature has become an integral part of the daily press, not cartooning, which is a branch of drawing as distinct from caricature as pastel painting is distinct from etching, but the simple pure depiction of well-known figures in the news; humorously stressed and keenly accentuating their facial and bodily characteristics. If we are to have a national school of caricature we must reckon with those native pioneers of the craft, Carlo de Fornaro, Alfred Freuh, Ernest Haskell and Oliver Herford.

Some day it may occur to some wealthy patron of the finer arts to establish a foundation for the instruction of would-be caricaturists. The man who has the temerity to do this will, of course, be taking his life in his hands, for the blundering caricaturist must remain untrammelled in his art; you cannot padlock Pegasus and expect him to fly. If I were a millionaire I could secretly endow a school of caricature and watch my words lampoon my friends.

More evils have been abated, more polite crimes have been exposed by the best of the caricaturists than all the sermons preached in Christendom. While Thomas Nast was chiefly a cartoonist, his single figure of the late Bill Tweed, with roving eye and a costume of prison pinstrip, and with dollar marks cunningly inserted in the interstices, was the instrument through which public opinion finally functioned in a way that sent the arch-robber of New York politics to the safe if uneasy haven of a penitentiary career.

Given a caricature with the punch of an idea behind it and you can work wonders of righteousness. But any one can draw a distorted face; the real art of caricature is that in which there is purpose and a discernment of such frailties as prominent flesh is heir to.—Perriton Maxwell in Arts and Decoration.

Cousins' Philosophy.

"My philosophy of life," says James Cousins, United States senator from Michigan, "has been to let the future take care of itself. You cannot devote your mind or time to scheming and planning for your own future without injury to the work you have on hand at the moment. You must do what you can the best you know how each day. Obviously, you cannot have your mind absolutely absorbed in what you are doing and at the same time be worrying or strategizing about your own future activities or ambitions."

"A man must get his reward from his work. Work itself is the best, the only reward."

"The right kind of man, with the right kind of record, seldom has to seek position or office. Usually the office seeks him."—Forbes Magazine.

A New River.

There has been discovered in the Mont Blanc region a great subterranean river with a volume of about 50,000 gallons per minute. It runs from the base of the mountains under the Salere and Jura Alps. This river, which has been named "Faux-Belles," sends out many branches, which have formed little lakes and wells of pure and extremely cold water in the north-east departments of France and to some southern cantons of Switzerland. It is said that the waters of the "Faux-Belles," at a depth of from 75 to 150 feet, have carved out under the mountain wonderful caverns and grottoes, full of stalactites and stalagmites. Some of the caverns near Geneva are 50 feet high and 150 broad.—Exchange.

Our Only Wounded General.

In 1917 General Wood went overseas with other cantonment commanders, on observation duty. In France he was standing near a field gun which suddenly burst, killing a number of men and officers and wounding General Wood, who, though he had been denied the active service at the front which he craved, yet has the honor of wearing the wound stripe—the only general in the American army who can claim such distinction.—McClure's Magazine.

LIGHT GIVES QUEER EFFECTS

Developments of Photographs Strangely Affected by Colors Under Which They Are Taken.

Curious results are obtained when certain objects are photographed under different lights. For example, plates of a landscape obtained by infrared light gives the sky a jet black and trees and grass as white as snow. Ultra-violet photographs or pictures obtained through a quartz lens heavily silvered on one side show white garden flowers as quite black.

If the moon's whiteness were due to the presence of zinc oxide, then the localities in which this substance was present when photographed by ultra-violet rays would not appear white, but black. This plan has been tried in the case of lunar photographs, and in the neighborhood of the crater Aristarchus it is clearly shown that there is a considerable area where the surface material differs from that in its proximity.

In ordinary light this shows no variation from the rest of the surface, but repeated photographs taken with the quartz lens and silver lens prove that some unsuspected substance exists on that spot. The difficulty is to determine its nature. The only way at present, it seems, consists in photographing different rocks until one is found that presents the same characteristics as those of this district of the moon. There have been unavailing trials of lava, volcanic debris and minerals of many kinds.—Washington Star.

IS THE "Y" WORTH WHAT IT COSTS?

The Rev. Dr. Seeley Asks the Question After Citing a Comparison of Its Budget With the Cost of Running the Churches.

Following is the full text of the paper read by the Rev. Dr. Frank B. Seeley at a recent meeting of the Kingston Ministers' Association, which called for the criticism from Secretary Safford of the Y. M. C. A.:

Had the Christian church faced social and moral conditions with adequate physical equipment for its work of salvation and with a true conception of the wider implications of the Christian ethic, the Young Men's Christian Association would never have been. The survivors of Puritan individualism contented themselves with a rather void impeccability in private life and had no interest in the social content of Christianity. But with an awakened consciousness that the church was not ministering to the whole man, but only to the spiritual man; that man had a body to be developed as well as a soul to be saved; that man was a social being with social instincts to be expressed in a Christian atmosphere; that it did not behoove the church to allow the devil to monopolize the amusements and the idle moments of our youth—the need of such an institution as the Y. M. C. A. became apparent.

The business of the church is to persuade men of their actual union with God through the life of faith and conduct. That is what the life of affection and friendship ultimately means. That is where the comradeship of human service leads.

Now, I have no copy of the constitution of the Y. M. C. A. in my possession. I never read it but once in my life. I am simply stating that, as I understand it, and rise to the Y. M. C. A. It is the church of Christ working among young men for the realization of their best selves, morally, physically, socially, and above all and paramount to all spiritually.

The association exists for the application of certain principles. No one can be ignorant of the perils that surround young men today as human life grows more and more complicated. It is the principle of the Christian church to recognize these perils and to stand guard over the safety of the youth of a community. And where I use the word "safety," I mean something real and positive, not negative seclusion and monastic isolation. The Y. M. C. A. is no monastic retreat. We do not seek to build walls around a young man. We seek to put life into him. The safe and saved young man is a young man so full of the spirit of God that he can go into the midst of danger and temptation and not get hurt. He is one in whom there has been put by the Lord of life, such a stream of continual and complete vitality, physical and spiritual; that he is able to walk through the midst of peril and moral field and not be contaminated. So the Y. M. C. A. tries to give a man the highest thoughts of life and the highest impulses of life. It seeks to fill a man with lofty ideas, ideals and motives.

The church, seeking the highest interest of its young men, and not having in its immediate equipment the tools for the task, would guard its youth against disease by giving them the opportunity to fill themselves full of health by physical training in the Y. M. C. A.

But more than that, the church would emphasize the truth that a young man ought to realize that the true impulse back of Christian manhood is the delight and glory of serving God with those powers he possesses. To the Y. M. C. A. as an instrument of the church ought to preach salvation to our youth constantly, by preaching truth and by preaching work, by bringing men into the power of Him who is a Saviour, who will fill him with a divine hunger for truth and a divine passion for good works. So it ought to represent a great saving power in a community.

The one great need of the world today as always is personal character. The thing we need in high places and in the common work-a-day world is lofty and unselfish character. If there is any power that can elevate character and make men unselfish and true—that is what is needed and there is no power that can regenerate human character except religion, and until the Christian religion, until our Christ shall have so far regenerated human character that our young men shall act under its high impulses and principles, there is no real security for our community. It is these powers that belong to Christianity, that belong to the Christian Church, the power of elevating the whole plane of human character so that men shall be unselfishly devoted to the interests of their followers. There lies the hope of the world.

How then about the Y. M. C. A.? Unless the association be the simple representation of Christianity among us in all its glory and breadth and length and depth; unless the association has a large sympathy and understanding for every man who is in need, whatever his creed or the cut of his garment; unless it is seeking primarily and in all of its activities to make the young men of our city Christian in every part of their being, it is failing of its primary function and purpose.

We are asking the people of Kingston to contribute for the support of this association an amount of money equal to the budget of any three Protestant Churches in our city. Is it worth it? If there is a constant, definite purpose to make this association the center of definite Christian teaching and influence; if the young men of our city are keenly aware that this association is something more than a social club for those who are unable for financial or other reasons to join the Kingston Club, but a place for the building of Christian character, then it is worth all it costs in dollars and cents. Sometimes it seems a bit strange to me, though I have no doubt most of us ministers are mighty poor preachers, that outside of the summer open-air services on Sunday evenings, I do not know of any form for Christian teaching and inspiration being held for the young men of our city, and we are spending nearly $30,000 a year to maintain what to our men is largely a social club. Personally, I would like to see the Auditorium regarded as something more than a questionable financial asset and converted into dormitories where needy youth could get housed at a reasonable cost and young men of good income would pay a reasonable sum for their quiet sumptuous quarters instead of the paltry amount that well-to-do young men are paying today, i. e., $3 a week.

I would like to see the same kind of definite spiritual work being
